Dear FRCC Community,

I wanted to take a moment to provide you with some background on tonight's decision to move to remote operations for Wednesday, January 18th. On Monday, I shared information about our Winter Weather Closures and our internal practices document in my News You Can Use communication.

As you likely noticed, that document said for a "Typical storm (1 full-day closure of all campuses)" that FRCC would cancel both on-campus and Real-Time-Remote classes. Unfortunately, this storm came at a terrible time during the first week of classes. As we made the decision about the response to the storm, impacting the first day of classes for Monday/Wednesday classes and limiting students' ability to register for classes for this spring weighed heavily in our decision-making. Ultimately, in order to minimize the impact on instruction and student services, we decided to shift to remote operations instead of closing fully.

Thank you in advance for your understanding as we strive to support every FRCC student!

Dr. Colleen Simpson
